

For The Readers App

So, the app was a pet project of mine that I started sometime last year. The idea for it was to have an app where the user can find books that they are reading, add them to their own personal list and keep track of their progress as they continue to read. At the end, the user can give their opinion about their experience with the book.

Inside the app there is a search window. The search window falls in line with the task that was assigned in the assessment. The user can enter a title and the app will go through the Google Books API and find results that closely match the search word. With the added functionality of clicking on the individual results, you can get more details about the book itself. I am happy to expound on this app further during the interview.
